The Childress Numbers

Coach Childress came to campus with a goal for our pitchers. There are three stats that he really drills into his pitchers. The first is their strikeout to walk ratio (SO/BB), which he wants to be 3:1. The second is the number of hits per innings thrown (H/IP), this number should be a 1:1 ratio or lower. The final is the number of walks per nine innings pitched (BB/9), which he wants us to lead the league in.

Childress Numbers

T.Starling..	2.25	9.06	3.02	3.70	1.73	3.91
K.Thebeau...	2.16	6.63	4.31	5.19	1.52	3.82

I italicized the guys who led each category (except if Chambless or Heard lead, simply because those guys threw a total of 12 innings, which doesn't give me enough sample size to justify).

There are three other numbers that I find interesting, which I included above. The first is what I call "Free bases per 9 innings". It is the same thing as BB/9 except I threw in HBP into the equation because I consider think they are just as detrimental as a walk.

The second number I added is the ground ball to fly ball ratio. I'm a big fan of ground ball pitchers. I'm not saying I dislike fly ball pitchers, because an out is an out regardless of how it happens, but I think there is a smaller chance for something bad to happen when the ball is on the ground. The wind doesn't affect it, it doesn't get lost in the sun, it can't go over the fence, you very rarely see a fielder misjudge a ground ball, you can turn a double play....and the list goes on. Austin Creps led the squad in 2006 with a 2.2 GB:FB ratio (which is incredible) and Nicholson took the title in 2007 with a sickening 3.92 GB:FB.

Tim Hudson and Brandon Webb are two of my favorite big league pitchers for that reason. Year in and year out they're at the top of the leader board in GB:FB. Greg Maddux, Derek Lowe, and Chris Carpenter are always right there with them. Just so you know, in 2008 Brandon Webb had the best G/F ratio of any starter in the major leagues with a 1.86.

The third number I like to look at is the number of pitches per batter faced. It gives you an idea of how long deep into a ballgame a guy can get.

Two notes I wanted to make:

- If you look at Raley's numbers and take out the one Texas game that he got shelled in his road ERA drops to 5.87 and his road AGs jumps to 44 (also raising his overall AGs to 52).
- Starling had two games at each end of the pendulum on the road. If you look at Starling's numbers and take out the Nebraska game where he went 8 innings in relief his road ERA jumps up to 7.72. If you take out his Sam Houston game his road ERA drops to 2.57. If you take them both out his road ERA is 4.15.

I thought those three games were significant outliers and just wanted to mention them.
